

Why Euthanize

When an animal has lost its' ability to sustain a standard of life conducive to its' own well-being and the continuation of life only leads to more suffering, euthanasia is the necessary choice.

Cervical Dislocation

- Cervical dislocation is an accepted method by the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA)
- Minimal training needed to perform proper euthanizing technique and has unfailling, irreversible results
- Designed to promote minimal distress on birds and the person administrating or observing
- Sleek design for easy cleaning and sanitation
- KED-S, Scissors for birds up to 4 pounds
- KED-C, overall length 27 inch handle with gear for use on birds up to 30 pounds
- KED-B, overall length 40 inch for all sizes of birds including full size turkeys
- KED-T, overall length 40 inch with gear for use on birds up to 75 pounds
- U.S. Patent No. 8,152,605